POLITICAL NOTES.

—Who says the Democracy's dead? It carried three counties in Kansas out of seventy-two.

—Two-thirds of the members of the house of representatives about to meet at Washington, have never served in Congress—and never ought to.

—By a vote of eleven to two, the Chicago Board of Education refused to order the re-introduction of the Bible in the schools.

—The Republicans of Virginia are engaged in an effort to strengthen their organization in that State, and a change of feudal office holders is the first thing desired.

—The new Democratic Constitution of Alabama has undoubtedly been ratified. Its two principal features are, the repudiation of the State debt, and the overthrow of the public school system.

—The gathering of the Democratic clans at Washington is already in progress, the Solons—lucus a non—crowding together from all points of the compass as lively as buzzards after a carcass.

—Tilden began at the New York canal frauds a long time before Bristow got at the whiskey ring. Nevertheless, Bristow has got a lot of the whiskey ringites in jail, and Tilden hasn't jugged a man.

—Fruits of Republicanism: Kansas is only fourteen years old, but she receives and sends out more letters and newspapers than the entire State of Missouri, St. Louis included, which is forty years older.

—In Kentucky the public fund for the education of colored children amounts to thirty-nine cents a year for each pupil. If the Democrats gave the negro a forty-cent education he would know more than themselves.

—The Democratic papers, in casting up the prospects for next year, generally figure a tie in the electoral college. This is a little weak, it appears to us. While they are at it, they might just as well figure out enough to make the thing look a little cheerful to them.

—The count of the Indian trust fund lately ordered by Secretary Chandler shows the fund to have increased $449,-150 during Secretary Delano's administration. Will the wretched authors of the lying rumors that these bonds had been tampered with have the grace to feel ashamed of themselves?

—The shipment of American cottons to Europe, especially to Great Britain, is gradually increasing. This is one of the results of a protective tariff. In less than a year England will abandon her free trade policy, or her mills will continue to go to ruin as they have recently commenced to do.

—The last hope of Democracy in Kansas has been cruelly snuffed out by the discovery that the regular Republican candidate was elected Representative in the sixty-fifth district over the Democratic nominee by one majority. Montgomery was the county in the State which was believed to have gone "all Democratic."

—Col. Wm. B. Mann received his appointment as Prothonotary of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia through the casting vote of Judge Allison, one of Democratic judges. The election, therefore, was not a partisan one, and as Mr. Mann is excellently well qualified for the place, his selection must prove generally acceptable.

—The White Leaguers have carried Mississippi by a good round majority, under duress. The reintroduction of "the whipping-post, pillory, branding irons and other simple and efficacious modes of punishment used in the purer and better days of the Republic" is being strongly urged. If this is the first outgrowth of the inspiration of Democratic victory, what is likely to be the last?

—The temperance folks come in just nowhere in the count. While giving them credit for the best intentions in the world, frankness compels us to admit that they didn't form even a respectable tail to the Democratic kite. Their candidate for Governor is done quite Browne, and their Treasurer will never pack a penny in the vaults of the Commonwealth. The numerous prospective Attorney Generals, Secretaries of the Commonwealth and Private Secretaries throughout the Commonwealth, who have been thus unceremoniously flattened out, have our most sincere condolence in their deep affliction but them reminder that "it is better to have loved and lost, than never have loved at all."—Pottsville Standard, Dem.

THE THIRD TERM NONSENSE.

The papers are again discussing the Third Term question with more earnestness than ever, and it is not alone the Democratic papers, but many Republican papers see, or pretend to see, that Gen. Grant is going to be a candidate for a third term, notwithstanding the fact that Grant has said that he should not seek the position, or that the Republicans in several of the States, in convention assembled, have positively declared against any one holding the office more than two terms.

We must say that all this third term talk seems like the most arrant nonsense. If the people do not want President Grant for a third term they need not and will not nominate him, however much he may desire the position. It is for the people to say who shall be nominated for President, by the Republican party, at least, and if they decide against Grant, his "jig is up," and if he wants to be a candidate after that let him nominate himself, and vote for himself, and that will be the end of the matter. We believe that President Grant was honest when he said he did nor seek a nomination for a third term. We believe that the Republicans of Pennsylvania were honest and meant what they said when they declared that they were opposed to any "third term" project.

The way they present this matter seems humiliating to us. They seem to convey the idea that the President can have the nomination if he asks for it, and the people will have little to say in the matter. Has the power of the people to make their own officers passed away? Are we to have a certain man for a candidate whether we will or no? That President Grant's administration has been a success, no one can deny. That he would make as good a President a third time as he has for the terms just closing, we do not doubt. But the people will not, for the best man that ever lived, break over the rule established by Washington, of no more than two terms. For the people to break over this rule would not be cautious nor wise. Rotation in office is one of the great features that distinguishes our Republic from a monarchy. It prevents the centralization of power, checks innumerable evils that might otherwise arise.

We believe General Grant is a true patriot, and loves his country too well to lend himself to a project that would open the door to we know not what. We believe the late elections have been carried in part by an implied or understood pledge to the people that the President would not be a candidate again. For his friends or Republican papers to advocate his claims is breaking faith with the people, and will only result in harm to our party. The people are not for him; that is plain, and we do not believe that Grant is the coming man. It may be Hartranft, or Hayes, or Cameron, or Blaine, or some person at present unknown to fame; but no third term for us.

By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that application will be made to the Legislature for the repeal of the law passed by Hon. Fred Kurtz, increasing notary fees fifty per cent. This application will meet the hearty endorsement of the poor and middle classes who have to pay the extortionate fees now charged by the notaries under Mr. Kurtz' law. In addition to the above, we call attention to the fourth plank in the platform adopted by the Republican Convention of Pennsylvania in 1874, viz.:

Inasmuch as great abuses have grown up in this State under our present system of fees as a compensation for county officers, we demand such legislation as will substitute adequate salaries for fees and such as will allow no more than a fair and just compensation for services rendered.

It will be seen that the Republican party are already committed to a reduction of unjust fees, and the sooner the Republicans in the Legislature make a move in the right direction the better it will be for the people. It frequently occurs that men are elected to county offices who cannot earn a respectable living in any other vocation. Such men enter office with inflated ideas, and are apt to take all the advantages they can get to augment their treasury, and we are sorry to say that we are informed that some of Centre county's officials do not come in the catalogue of exceptions.

BOSS MEEK FRIGHTENED AT THE THIRD TERM BUGABOO.

Our neighbor, the Watchman, has again been attacked with a fit of thirdtermism that has thrown it into a sort of spasmodic paroxysm that must be truly excruciating. Well, all we have to say is, that the Republican party, being the party of loyalty, intelligence, and true American citizenship, will take care of third-termism in its own way, and will in nowise hold the Watchman responsible for the result. The Republican party, by conventional action, has committed itself positively on that question and settled it so far as it is concerned. The Republican party does not recognize nor subject itself to the one man power as does the Democratic party in New York, and in Centre county, where it bows the suppliant knee to Meekism, and like the veriest spaniel, licks the rod that chastises it.

But then, since Governor Hartranft's stable doors still swing on the Governor's stable, and by the authority of the people of Pennsylvania, will swing for three long years, despite the exhausting intellectual effort of the editor of the Watchman to get off heavy editorials thereon during the campaign, and the theme is thus exhausted, and since the editor of the Watchman failed (and for good consideration) to get to be State Senator, about the only thing left that is worthy of engaging his towering intellect is the trite and dead question of third-termism.

So we hope our neighbor will go in and do wonders on the third termism, as it will do about as much to elect a Democratic President in 1876, as his heavy editorials on the governor's stable doors, seen through the imagination of his bacchanalian eye, did to elect a Democratic governor this fall.

But as long as the Watchman has "Third Termism," and we have Meekism to engage our intellects, our readers and patrons will not want for solid editorial reading in Centre county.

DEMOCRATIC PROGRAMME.

DEMOCRATIC PROGRAMME TO-DAY OF THE CENTRE COUNTY DEMOCRACY

FIRST.

The baptismal ceremony of rebaptizing C. T. Alexander into the Democratic party. Alexander makes an humble confession of his bolting sin last year, and Meek and his friends perform the ceremony, and install him into good standing in the party, and elect him chairman of the county convention.

SECOND.

Meek will carry off the Senatorial honors of Centre county, but knowing the impossibility of his getting the nomination in the district, he gets the privilege of appointing his own conferees, so he can carry out his contract with Boyer, of Clearfield, from whom he is to receive $1,000 for the Centre county conferees. This bargain to include a renomination of Boyer next year, and thus give him three years in the Senate.

THIRD.

Hon. C. T. Alexander, however, intends, after a probation of one year after his rebaptism into the party to-day, to step in and carry off all the senatorial honors of Centre county next fall; and as Clinton county has Congressman, and Clearfield county has U. S. Senator, and has had State Senator for the past twelve years, he will insist on and demand the nomination of a Centre county candidate.

FOURTH.

Meek sells out to Boyer for $1,000 for one session in the Senate. The Democracy of Centre county reward C. T. Alexander for his bolting last fall by giving him control of the Democratic party for the ensuing year. Meek and Alexander have thus established their absolute ownership of the Democracy of Centre county.

The above programme made its appearance on the day the Democratic convention met in Centre county this fall, and in witnessing the result of the senatorial campaign, and the political canvass in Centre county, we are not surprised to see a prediction so literally fulfilled in every particular. Meek apparently struggled hard to win the senatorial prize, but does not the sequel show that that struggle was only half real. Was not Meek defeated with his own consent? Did he not arrange the ticket to apparently shift the responsibility onto poor Peale, of Lock Haven? Was it so much a trick on the part of Peale as it was the one thousand dollars, that deprived Centre county of the State Senator? Was not the previously arranged programme just being simply and faithfully carried out? How much over the one thousand dollars did the editor of the Watchman receive? Will not Alexander carry off the senatorial honors of Centre county next year? Alexander is the coming senatorial man. Look ahead for breakers! Go in boys, there is nothing like being "on top." It pays.

Moody and Sankey in Philadelphia.

In another column our readers will see the announcement of the meetings of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, the evangelist and singer, begun in Philadelphia on Sunday, November 21st. Some weeks ago it was decided to invite Messrs. Moody and Sankey to Philadelphia, and a committee of fifteen ministers, representing all the evangelical denominations of the city, was appointed to arrange for their coming. This committee organized by electing Rev. Richard Newton, D. D., of the Episcopal church, Chairman, and Rev. C. P. Masden, of the Reformed church, as Secretary. The ministers' committee then appointed a committee of thirteen prominent and well known business gentlemen of the various denominations to conduct the business arrangements for the meeting. This committee elected Mr. George H. Stuart, Chairman; Mr. John R. Whitney, Treasurer; and Mr. Thomas K. Cree, Secretary. This committee at once proceeded to business. They secured the old freight depot of the Pennsylvania, Railroad Co., Thirteenth and Market streets, which extends from Market street back to an alley, 373 feet, and from Thirteenth to Juniper street, 250 feet. About a hundred workmen were at once set to work making the necessary changes, and by the middle of the present week the building will be ready for occupancy. The main audience room will seat comfortably ten thousand people. At the back end is the speaker's platform, rising in tiers, seating a thousand people and two-thirds way forward the floor gradually rises to the front of the hall, giving every one in the audience the opportunity to see and hear the speaker. Although a very large audience hall, it, acoustic properties are such that the speaker can be readily heard in any part of it. In addition to the main audience hall there are three large inquiry rooms, and a vestibule twenty feet wide running around three sides of the buildings from which there is egress by ten large doors opening upon three streets. The building will be thoroughly heated by steam and lighted by about a thousand gas burners in reflectors, rings and parallel jets. Daylight is admitted, and abundant facilities for ventilation is obtained by a series of skylights in the roof. Eleven thousand chairs are in the building, and a corps of three hundred Christian men has volunteered and are being trained for ushers to seat the public. A choir of six hundred voices is in training and the service of song will be led by it under the leadership of Mr. Sankey. A class of three hundred Christian workers, selected by the ministers from all the churches of the city for service in the inquiry rooms is being trained by the Rev. Richard Newton, D. D., of the Episcopal church; Rev. R. M. Hatfield, D. D., of the Methodist Episcopal church; Rev. W. P. Breed, D. D., of the Presbyterian church; and Rev. J. Wheaton Smith, D. D., of the Baptist church. The ministers and Christian people of the city of all denominations are heartily in sympathy with the work and are rendering every assistance in preparing for it. The cost of all the immense preparations will be about ($20,000) twenty thousand dollars and it is expected from present indications that no call for contributions will have to be made, but that the money will be the spontaneous gift of those in sympathy with the movement.

The meetings, which will continue for several weeks, will begin on Sunday at 8 A. M. and 4 P. M. and on week days at 8 A. M., and 7.30 P. M., with an additional service probably at 4 P. M. The service will be open to all, except on occasion of special service, when tickets of admission will be distributed free to the classes for whom the services are specially intended.

The great work of these gentlemen abroad has excited unusual interest, and the extent or importance of it cannot be overestimated. At a meeting held in Glasgow a week ago, to celebrate the anniversary of their visit to that city, on a most gloomy day, the Crystal Palace, seating six thousand people was crowded all day, and a second meeting was organized, and thousands were turned away, unable to get into either meeting. Rev. Dr. Wallace, of the United Presbyterian church, in a public address said, a year after their visit, as a result of it seven thousand have been added to the churches, and that in the Evangelists' rooms were recorded the names of three thousand families, in Waldom (a neglected section of the city,) asking that a missionary be sent to visit and have religious conversation with them. At a similar anniversary meeting in Liverpool, it was also stated in a public address that, omitting all aged people, children and women, three thousand active young men had been added to the workers in the various churches. Like reports come from Edinburg, London, and other points. The meetings in Brooklyn have attracted immense audiences upon all occasions, the Rink has been crowded, and two and three overflow meetings have been conducted to accommodate those unable to gain admission to it. The movement is one in which large numbers of our readers are deeply interested, and its progress will be watched with special attention.

OUR ASSOCIATED PRESS LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22, 1875

POLITICAL SQUIBS.

Under the last appointment, this city elects five congressmen, and although the nomination does not take place until May next, aspirants for law-givers, at $15 per diem, including Sabbaths, are industriously circulating amongst the Warwicks of the party, in order to win their favor. In Randall's district a scheme is under consideration, by the adherents of Senator Wallace, to defeat him at the party convention, and State Senator Nagle is booked as the statesman to step into Randall's shoes. The Texas-Pacific Railroad Company, of which Colonel Thomas Scott, is president, having its office in Randall's district, will go for his ears in earnest, in retaliation for Randall's hostility to railroad subsidy schemes, but Mr. Randall being stronger than railroad rings will win the fight.

Judge Kelley will be less fortunate, as his sympathy for Allen, of Ohio, and Pershing, of this State, has left him without a party. Colonel Elisha W. Davis, State Senator, is on the slate as Kelley's successor. The district gives about 5,000 Republican majority, but is a section of the city where the independent voter doth abound as numerously as "The leaves of Valambrose."

In order that the contest in Kelley's district may not be altogether void of interest, the independent voters will probably urge Col. McClure to enter the lists against Davis, and as "Aleck" has a penchant for buckling just such a majority, and "getting away" with it, in the interest of that class who insist on establishing it as a fundamental rule in American politics, that the dictates of party shall be subordinate to the principles of manhood, Mr. Davis is seriously considering whether, after all, the Senate of Pennsylvania, at $1,000 per annum, and postage stamps, is not preferable to Congress, at $5,000 a year.

As there is talk of Mr. Allison, register of the treasury, being made assistant secretary of the Interior, our city treasurer, Mr. Widener, is casting covetous eyes towards that possible vacant chair. Mr. Widener would make a good registering officer, as indeed I have yet to make the acquaintance of any Philadelphia politician, Republican or Democrat, who is not, by education, habit and inclination, a most thoroughly trained register.

Charles N. Mann, who gives the most reliable estimates of results in Pennsylvania politics, of any person in this city, is of the opinion that Hartranft and Hayes is the ticket that would win without an effort, in 1876. Mr. Mann thinks that about the only platform necessary is the representation of a public school house, with the American flag floating above it; the Cardinal McCloskey, torch in hand, approaching to fire it, and Hartranft and Hayes, with drawn swords advancing from the school to meet the invader. I am who I heard a Methodist minister remark in the street cars a few days ago. I am a good deal of the opinion that the idea of young Mann will be the chief plank of the platform next year.

THE CENTENNIAL.

The colossal statue, surmounting the Art Gallery Building, of which I made mention two weeks ago, has undergone some improvements. The statue was a representation of an Indian squaw, with a feathered head-dress of eagle plumes, and habited in a pinback skirt of the present fashion. As she was a subject for universal ridicule, the artist, Mr. Mueller, a German, has caused her feathers to be chopped off, and what Mueller intended as "a representation of Columbia," by a ridiculous combination of Pocohontas and the Goddess of Liberty, becomes by this transformation, a barcheaded girl of the period.

The question of accommodating our visitors with bed and board is still an undetermined one. The New York Herald believes it to be impossible for the visitors to all find accommodations here, and I agree with that Journal. The lowest estimate yet made, by any one, of the number who will come to the Exhibition, from outside this city, is 8,000,000, or 20,000 persons for each day the Exhibition is open. As it is expected that each person will remain on an average at least three days, this would then require accommodations for 60,-000 people; then again, 60,000 persons will be here permanently as exhibitors, workmen or clerks of those having articles on exhibit, making in all, 120,000 to provide with food and lodging.

To meet this demand upon us, I must confess we are doing but little. The contractor for the Centennial Buildings, Mr. Richard Dobbins, is himself the most enterprising man amongst us, in this respect. Within one hundred yards of the main Exhibition Building, he is erecting a magnificent fire-proof hotel, that will be finished and furnished by January 1st, next. This building, called the United States Hotel, is really a block of dwelling houses and being built in the style prevalent here—each house having a parlor, dining-room and kitchen on the first floor, two bed rooms, bath and sitting room in the second, and four bed rooms on third floor—the whole forms the most complete hotel in this city. There being nine large bed rooms in each house, as now arranged, and in a measure almost entirely private, the idea is perfect, and for a party of ladies and gentlemen from any particular place, who desire to keep together, Mr. Dobbins's "Dwelling House Hotel," he ought to call it, is about the only institution that meets such a want.

This building, covering one acre of ground, will accommodate about 1,000 persons, and if I could only announce that fifty more such buildings were in course of construction, the only apprehension that now exists would be removed.

Some idea may be formed of the extravagant charges for hotel accommodations, by the amount the Bryn Mawr Hotel intends charging the German Prince and his suite. The party have engaged the Bryn Mawr Hotel for the month of July—no other guests are to be taken—and for that one month's board, the sum of $100,000 is to be paid.

One of the things about which I desire to caution your readers, is the advertisements inserted in the country papers for "young ladies for the Centennial Exposition." No young ladies are wanted at the Centennial, and it is for a nameless purpose that these scoundrels want "young ladies prepossessing in appearance." A well known broker on Third street, has fitted up an establishment in grand style—the furniture, alone, costing $60,000—as a palace of resort for fashionable gentlemen, whose bank accounts are as large as their morals are depraved. It is to fill this and similar palaces of sin, that "young ladies from the country" are wanted.

One whelp, who has been making use of the U. S. mails, to inveigle a few hundred females, has just been brought up with a sharp turn, by U. S. Attorney John K. Valentine. As our new district attorney has no sympathy for such scoundrels, he will convict this Lothario, and Judge Cadwalader will extend to him the hospitalities of Cherry Hill—our State prison, until the Centennial shall have come and gone.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The fees of our Coroner, elected upon a platform of salaries, and not fees, amounted to $17,144.75, up to and including October 31st, and would you believe that this reform coroner pocketed those fees without ever hinting salary a single time.

And the Hon. Furman Sheppard, district attorney, who defeated Col. Wm. B. Mann, has done much better than even Coroner Goddard has done.

In order to put money in their pockets, a coterie of moral and political reformers have organized an association for the purpose of furnishing buyers of real estate in Philadelphia, with court searches, showing what judgments, liens and mortgages, are entered against any particular property. The gentlemen propose to place a large amount of bonds on deposit with a trust company, as security against any erroneous certificates they may give; but as the organization propose applying to the legislature in January, for a charter, giving it special privileges, there is a snake in the bill that ought to have its head smashed.

The appropriation of $600,000 by Japan, to enable that half heathenish country to be fully represented at the Centennial, is rather severe upon the Christianized States of this country, as it exceeds the sum appropriated by all the States of the Union, if Pennsylvania's $1,000,000 is excepted.

In view of the fact that pound butter is sixty cents per pound, eggs forty-five cents per dozen, lard twenty cents, veal cutlets twenty-five cents, mutton legs eighteen cents per pound, potatoes twenty cents a half peck, sausage twenty cents per pound, scrapple ten cents, sirloin steaks thirty cents a pound, poultry twenty five cents per pound, and everything else proportionately high, with a ready market, it occurs to me that your farmer readers could not do a better thing for themselves and for us than to send their produce right along this way.

The selection of Col. Wm. B. Mann, as Prothonotary of the courts of this city, gives the utmost gratification to his friends, and he has warm ones here. The struggle was a desperate one, and treachery and stratagem were used in vain to defeat him, which makes his victory the more creditable. Col. Mann may have faults, as who indeed of us is wholly without them, but if so, I confess to my ignorance of them. I have known Col. Mann from my boyhood, and I have seen him practice more acts of charity—of which the world knew nothing—than all the other public men in the city combined.

The corner stone for the Witherspoon Monument was laid during the week, with great pomp, by the Presbyterians. Witherspoon came to this country a century ago, was President of Princeton College, a member of the Centennial Congress, and a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and the Articles of Confederation.

Poetry.

Bring Home Your Money To-night.

Oh, father, dear father, don't stay away late,
Come home when your day's work is o'er;
For mother'll be watching for you at the gate,
Don't grieve her poor heart any more.
She's weary with sewing to keep us in bread.
And her face is so haggard and white,
For you know, father, dear, that we must all be fed,
Then bring home your money to-night!

CH.—Then bring home your money to-night!
Oh, bring home your money to-night!
For you know, father, dear, that we all must be fed,
Oh, bring home your money to-night!

The old tavern keeper is rich, I am sure;
His acres spread out far and wide,
While father, dear father, you know we are poor,
And needy, and hungry beside.
Don't give him your hardly earned dollar, I pray,
For the drinks that will madden and blight,
But in manliness turn from the tempter away,
And bring home your money to-night!

CHORUS—

Oh, father, dear father, don't stay away late;
'Twill be Saturday night as you know,
The beautiful Sabbath might dawn, if you wait,
And find us in sorrow and woe.
No bread in the pantry, no comfort in store,
And nothing to make our home bright,
Good-bye now, dear father, don't drink any more,
But bring home your money to-night!

CHORUS—

Just as of Old.

I saw my love in dreams last night
Pass up the sleeping moon-lit lands,
The love-beams in her dear eyes bright,
A rosebud in her rose-leaf hands.
And round me, as I nearer stepped,
I felt her soft arms steal and fold,
While close against my heart she crept
Just as of old.

The gay dawn broke, my love was gone,
The golden dream was past and dead;
I got me to the churchyard lone
Wherein my love lay buried.
I found a headstone gray with years,
I bowed me to the morn mists cold,
I wept and knew she saw my tears,
Just as of old.

But ever while I live alone
This comfort comes and soothes my care—
We two may meet, when all is done,
Far off in Heaven's garden fair;
And by the light above, beyond,
Chastened, each other's face behold,
Stainless, more pure, but true and fond,
Just as of old.

Martha or Mary.

I cannot choose; I should have liked so much
To sit at Jesus' feet—to feel the touch
Of His kind, gentle hand upon my head
While drinking in the gracious word He said.

And yet to serve Him!—Oh, divine employ—
To minister and give the Master joy,
To bathe in coolest springs His weary feet,
And wait upon Him while He sat at meat!

Worship or service—which? Ah, that is best
To which He calls me, be it toil or rest—
To labor for Him in life's busy stir,
Or seek His feet a silent worshipper.

So let Him choose for us; we are not strong
To make the choice; perhaps we should go wrong,
Mistaking zeal for service, sinful sloth
For loving worship—and so fail of both.

Our Story Teller.

The Song the Teakettle Sung.

The teakettle was humming something that sounded like this, and startled Nora, who was half asleep by the fire:

"Puff, puff, puff, steam, steam, steam!
Wake, little maiden, out of your dream,
There's a begger at the door,
Steam, steam, steam, puff, puff, puff!
On the table there's supper enough
For one little maiden more."

"Dear me!" said she to herself, "I did not hear any one ot the door. What a funny teakettle! I believe, after all, its telling a story."

But no, for sure enough, when she opened the door, there sat a forlorn little being on the step, with white hair that looked like thistle-down, and so long and tangled that it hid the face entirely. All that Nora could see of her was her head and a bit of ragged old cloak; and, as she remarked afterwards, "the white reminded her for all the world of a tall thistle-stalk in the autumn that had caught and was clinging to a bit uv rags!"

"Come in and warm yourself, won't you?" said she, half afraid of the weird little object.

The child arose without a word and followed her into the room. Nora placed her a seat by the fire, and she spread out her tiny purple hands to catch the heat with an air of great satisfaction.

"I wonder if the taykettle conjured her up, sure?" thought Nora. "She looks like a steam sprite, if there do be any such, but indade I niver heard of the like."

She was the possessor of a learned volume which went very deeply into fairy lore, but it did not mention anything of the kind.

"Where do you live, sure? Did ye get lost poor little thing?" she questioned the child.

"I live down by the wharf, and I didn't get lost, only a dog stole my basket with all I had got for the day in it, and I don't dare to go home. Aunty whip me when I don't carry anything home, and she'd kill me for losing the basket," said the mite, in a precise, piping little tongue.

"What's yer name thin?" said Nora, her rosy Irish face all ashine with sympathy.

"Mamma used to call me Tina?" said she, "but aunty calls me Mary."

"And where is the mother, that ye live with the aunt?"

"She said she was going to Heaven, but they took her away in a box. I suppose they carried her there, though they didn't go up when I saw them. She was sick, O such a long time! and I wanted her to go, because she said that she shouldn't be sick any more, but be happy with papa," said the little thing, solemnly.

"And the aunt is a cruel thafe of a woman, and sends ye out a begging, with your poor bits of toes to the ground in weather like this! Bad 'cess to an aunt like that! I'd lave her to herself, entirely. You shall stay with me to-night anyway. We're poor enough oursels, me mother and I. Me mother works out in a hotel. She used to cook, and make lots of money; but then she got sick, being over the fire so much, and now she helps the cook, and does little odd jobs, and little wages she gets. I worruk, too. I'm cash girl at Haberly's, and with what we both earrun, we get along. Me mother sleeps with me nights, and to-night, coz 'tis Saturday night, she's coming to supper. It's her I'm kaping the table for."

"Will she like to have me here?" said the child, looking anxiously toward the door.

"Sure she will. Me mother has the kind heart. Don't you fear, me dear. How could anybody shut their doors on the likes o' you? You'll looks like a bit fairy."

Just then the door opened, and a woman with a kind face, very like Nora's, entered the room.

"Here's me mother," said Nora, springing up gladly. "Mother see what a nice little company I've got."

"Nice indade," said Mrs. Murphy, patting the cornsilk head. "And who might she be, me dear."

"Her name's Tina, and she lives with her aunt, and her aunt is cruel and beats her; and, mother, I'm going to keep her with me—for a while, at least. She's lost her basket, and doesn't dare to go home, and the weather so cowld!" said honest Nora, all in one breath.

"Well, well, we'll see about it, me dear; but now let us take a bit of something to eat, if the tay's all ready."

Tina seemed pleased with the little flowered plate Nora placed for her. Her eyes were as bright and wide as stars, and she seemed more than content with her surroundings; but she could not eat.

"Maybe you had your dinner late?" said Nora, anxiously.

"I don't have dinners," piped Tina; "I only have breakfasts and suppers."

"I'm afeard the child's going to be sick. Her cheeks are so flushed like, an' her eyes is too bright," said Mrs. Murphy.

But Tina said she wasn't sick, and she liked to look at the pretty room; and the red flowers on the paper.

"The paper do be pretty. I put it on meself, dear," said Mrs. Murphy. "But you will be sick if you don't ate a bit. I always know me Nora's going to be sick when she don't care for her supper."

"Do you know, mother, that taykettle's found speech for itself? It woke me up a talking and singing away this very night," said Nora, earnestly. "It made a sort o' song about somebody's being at the door, and there being room at the table for one more. And sure enough, there was Tina at the door, though I hadn't heard her at all!"

"Och, you were dreaming, me dear, taykettles don't spake!"

"Why, no, 'twasn't exactly spaking," said Nora; "it was just singing along a sort o' song."

It was a fearfully cold night, and as it grew later the wind arose and blew furiously. Mrs. Murphy had thought of taking Tina home herself, as they had but one bed, and that one hardly wide enough for two; but she could not have the heart to take such a frail-looking thing out into such bitter cold. But warm-hearted Nora would have slept on the hard floor herself, rather than have her brave that dangerous aunt, to say nothing of the cold, for aside from the pity she felt for her, she took a great fancy to the child. She told her fairy stories until bedtime. The wonderful adventures of that sagacious youth Jack the Giant Killer; the fascinating story of Puss in Boots, and perils and triumphs of those valuable philanthropists the Champions of Christendom. Tina's own eyes shone like stars ont of the tangle of white hair, and she hardly dared to breathe for fear of losing the spell.

"I like stories," she said, clasping her little brown hands; "and you are so good. I never saw anybody so good before, 'cept mamma, and she went away so long ago I can't hardly 'member. I spect you're a angel, are'n't you? Angels are gooder than anything!"

Poor Nora, with her little freckled Irish face and funny turn-up nose! She didn't look much like an angel. She couldn't help laughing at the idea herself, though she felt immensely flattered. She thought that Tina looked like an angel when she was attired for bed that night. She had put one of her own white night night dresses on to her, and combed the cornsilk locks back from the little fair wistful face. The child's beauty was striking, and it was highbred beauty, too; even Nora recognized that. But there were black and blue marks on the delicate shoulders and arms that made her warm Irish heart ache, and she kissed them with something like tears in her honest blue eyes.

It isn't me that'll ever let ye go back to the aunt again," said she, half to herself, "If I have but a crust, the bit thing shall share it, and I'll slape on the floor meself, if me mother objects to being crowded."

The next morning Tina was flushed and feverish, but still said that she wasn't sick; her head ached—that was all. Nora hurried home from mass as fast as ever she could, to keep her company, and the two children spent a cosy day together. Nora kept a bright fire, and told stories until her stock was entirely exhausted. Tina seemed thoroughly happy, and took no thought of the morrow. Nora, to her, was like one of the good faries in her stories—she would take care of her. Aunty and the days when she went begging were already like a dream.

"It's onlikely that spalpeen iv a woman she calls aunty is any relative of hers," said Mrs. Murphy, as she watched her while she was sleeping that night. "Mind, Nora, that child has gentle blood. These vile women steal pretty frail-like children to send a begging. Bad 'cess to 'em! The mother's a weepin' for the poor little lamb now I doubt not."

"Ah, mother, we'll never let her go back to the likes iv her, will we? Didn't the praste say as the good saints would give back all a body spent in deeds of charity?"

"But, me dear, how are you iver going to provide for another? Aren't your own poor bit of toes almost out of the ould shoes now? And when will we be able to buy another pair? Coal is so dear, and there's so much spint in this weather. Then I want you to go to school and get a bit o' learnin', and not grow up in such haythin ignorance."

"But I don't want to go to school," said Nora; "I can read now. I'd a hape rather kape Tina."

Poor little Tina! she was really very ill. All night she tossed and moaned in her sleep, and in the morning she could hardly lift her head from the pillow. Mrs. Murphy did all she could for her before she went to her work and Nora hung over her until the last moment, almost broken-hearted that she must leave her to suffer alone. But work begins on Monday morning, and if she did not go to the store she would lose her place. Then what would become of her friend?

When she came home at noon she found her in a fever; her eyes looked wild and strange, and she talked incoherently.

"Whativer shall I do for her?" said poor Nora, in despair. "It's the favur she have, sure; and who knows but she'll die, the poor thing? I'll never get over it if she do die on my hands. Perhaps a jug of hot water at the fate would draw the hate from the head, and praps a bit of hot tay, if I could make her drink it, would make her feel better. Taykettle," she said, as she stood that useful vessel on the glowing coals, "you've told me to take the little thin' in and give her the supper: now tell me what to do for her if you can. She is that ill that it's fit to break one's heart just to look at her."

But the teakettle only looked mildly contemplative, and didn't open its mouth; and as Tina was quiet for a few moments she sat down by the fire to think what she could do to help the little sufferer.

"I'll not lave her again," she said to herself; "I shall lose me place, but the saints will provide."

Leaning her head on her hands, she was quite lost in thought, until that funny witch-like old teakettle started her with another one of its sage sayings in rhyme. The steam was pouring in a flood out of its crooked nose, and it sang along in this wise:

"Steam, steam, steam, puff, puff, puff!
The doctor, the doctor, 'tis plain enough
What to do for the child!"

Nora started to her feet in a moment. A doctor sure enough. Why did she not think of it before. She was so unused to sickness that, with all her thoughtfulness, the idea of calling a doctor never entered her mind. She hardly knew there were such sort of people in the world.

"I'll run for one this instant," she said, "I've got two dollars iv me own, that I was saving for me boots; but it's better to let me feet go bare than let Tina be moaning in illness. I'm much obliged to you, taykettle, and sure I'll always be after asking advice of you. You're as good as gould." And she made a little courtesy, that was not mockery, by any means, to the homely household god; for if there was a fairy she believed that one haunted the teakettle.

Then, hardly stopping to put on her things she rushed out of the house.

"Do you know where there be's a doctor?" she asked of Mrs. Donahoe, over the way, who always had a sick baby.

But no, Mrs. Donahoe didn't know where there was a doctor who came for nothing to visit poor peple, and she "had no account of any other." And so Nora rushed away on the wind to find a doctor's sign. She found two or three, but the first one was away attending a patient; the second was ill himself, and did not go out; the third told her shortly without giving any reason, that he could not go to vis it her patient.

"If all the doctors be's as stony-hearted as you, I may as well go home now," said she to herself, as she stood on the sidewalk. She clasped her two little red hands together, looked in every direction, as if in search of help.

"What did you say about a doctor, my child!" said a gentleman who was waiting in an elegant carriage by the street side, noticing her look of distress.

"O, if I could only find a doctor, sir! The little one at me house is that sick I'm afeared she'll die."

"Indeed! Well, I'm a physician myself, and I will go to see the child at once, if you desire it. Your sister, I suppose."

"No sir, said she, without stopping to give an explanation. "The number is 10 Canal Court, if you please. I'll be at the door and show you the way up when you get there; and thank you kindly, sir."

"He didn't look as if he'd be that good," she thought, as she ran toward home. "I should 'a' said that he was sternlike and stuck-up, in his fine carriage, and with his gold-headed cane; but you niver can tell by looks."

He was rather a stern-looking man. Nora was half afraid of him as he came up the rickety steps into the house. He was not so very old, but his hair was snowwhite, and his features were sharp and compressed, as if he had known trouble, and he had a grand air, which seemed to awe the very house. Nora had brushed Tina's hair back from the little flushed face, and she laid quite still, with her wide fever-bright eyes fixed on the doctor.

He gave one glance at her, and then started back as if in alarm.

"Who is this child?" he demanded, in a tone of more severity than the occasion required, Nora thought.

"I don't know what her last name be's; I couldn't make out by what she said. Her first name's Tina."

"I thought so," he said, in a tone half triumphantly, half anxious. "But where did you find her? And he felt the fevered pulse with more than professional anxiety.

"She came here Saturday night, and we took her in," said Nora. "She was afeared to go home coz she'd lost her basket, and her aunt bates her. She sinds her out a begging. Me mother doesn't think it be's her aunt at all, though but some thafe of a woman that stoled her coz she was pretty."

The doctor bit his lips, and bent very low over the little prostrate figure.

"He be's a quare man," said Nora to herself.

"Do you think she she will die, sir!" she asked, with tears in her eyes.

"I hope not, my child; but she is very ill," he said, in husky tones. "I am indebted to you, my good girl, more than I can express," he went on, "for this little begger child is my grand-daughter. Her mother was lost to me years ago. She married a worthless man, against my will, and I never forgave her. When she was dying she wrote to me, begging me to care for her child when she was gone. I did not receive the letter for some time, as I was in Europe then; but when I did receive it, I hastened home with all possible speed. When I reached here she had been dead for nearly two months, as far as I could learn, and I could find no trace of the child, I have been searching for her ever since, and despaired of ever finding her. But as soon as my eye fell on her face this morning I recognized her, for she is the image of her mother when she was a child. She has her eyes, her hair, her forehead, her expression. We called her Tina, too." And the strong man's voice was broken, as if he were weeping.

"If he have been hard to his daughter, he repints, and may the saints forgive him!" prayed Nora.

"O, sir?" she said, "there do be a good fairy in our taykettle, and 'twas she that bade me take Nora in. I niver should a knowed she was at the door!"

The doctor looked at her as if he thought she were insane. But when Tina got well she found some sympathy in her faith in the "taykettle fairy." Tina was very, very ill for a time, but she got well at last. All through her illness, though she was delirious nearly all the time, and did not seem to recognize any one, she would have no one to wait on her but Nora. Nora's hand was the only one that could bring her relief; Nora's very presence seemed to quiet her.

When she was able to be moved to the luxurious home of her grandfather, Nora went with her, and Nora's mother also.

"I want my Nora always," she said.

And the saints did pay the honest little Irish girl tenfold for what she "spint in charity."

There was no more "climbing over people's stairs," no more pinching poverty, no more hard work for either herself or her mother after that; for Tina's grandfather in his gratitude could not do enough for them. He gave them a dear little homelike cottage for their very own, furnished in a way that would have suited the most fastidious; and, what was better to Nora than anything else, it was so near to Tina—just at the end of the garden. And besides that he gave them a sum of money which seemed almost fabulous to Nora and her mother. This was to be kept in the bank, and the interest of it to support them in their cheery little home.

Nora goes to school, and is growing into a perfect little lady, though the burr will cling to her Irish tongue; and she still holds to her faith in faries, and cherishes that old teakettle as if it were a golden treasure. And you may be sure she still "spins" in deeds of charity, for such a warm little heart as hers could never be made forgetful by prosperity.

Address of the Republican State Central Committee.

HEADQUARTERS
REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE,
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6, 1875.

Republicans of Pennsylvania:

It was a grand response you made in November to the greetings of our brethren in Ohio, Nebraska and Iowa, sent in October. It gives you occasion for sincere self-gratulation; it justifies your shouts of triumph echoing, cheeringly, from the Delaware to Lake Erie.

Splendid as have been your record and achievements in the past, you may well point with pride to your victory on Tuesday last—a pride renewed, emphasized, and reenforced by the verdict of a great people. You have easily placed yourselves at the head of the Republican column of eighteen hundred and seventy-six. In all respects, this victory is significant and complete. Your candidates were honest, your principles were righteous. The verdict concludes that discussion. General Hartranft, illustrious with his military service, had won added fame by a pure and signally successful civic career. Your gratitude, your patriotism, and your solicitude for the wellfare of the State compelled his continuance in the position of highest responsibility.

With a knowledge, begotten of proof, of the integrity of the State Treasury management, and with the actual demonstration that there was not now and never, under Republican officers, had been a defalcation to the amount of one dollar of the public moneys, you had the manhood and the courage to vindicate, boldly, your Treasury officers from the unfounded, false, and indecent charges of the political tramps who pursued them with malignant falsehood. With the calmness and patience of a patriotic and intelligent people, you discussed the existing financial question, stripped of disguises, and determined to sustain the national faith and common honesty in public affairs, and set the seal of your condemnation upon repudiation, and all the insiduous attempts to compass repudiation.

Against you was arrayed a motley but numerous host, discordant in principles, united only in the pursuit of power and plunder. They clamored for a change, but only offered delusive promises and fraudulent pretenses of reform; they exaggerated the public distress (neither the existence nor remedy for which is to be found in governmental, but social causes); they stimulated uneasiness in the public mind; they filled the land with inflammatory addresses and inflated proclamations; they vexed your ears with screaming oratory and with turgid blatant declamation; they charged that "there was something wrong," but proved nothing. Madness and senility seemed to rule the hour. In all this chaos you stood firm, nor were you tripped in your judgment, nor swayed from your integrity. From the brawlers and the demagogues you extorted your triumph, and have exalted the strength of the people in a Republican government.

The waves of political sophistry and financial heresy, bearing menace and danger to national honor, and to your most sacred educational and religious institutions, were stayed and broken by the firm walls of your own alleghanies; Democratic wrecks and stranded drift wood, now and then, alone, marking the subsidence of this tide of folly and claptrap.

Rejoicing as you do, remember that your victory is the fruit of organization, laborious and minute, and that, without organization, your power is gone and your energies are useless. Stand by your guns, maintain your ranks, take the touch of elbows, and hold yourselves in readiness for the final charge along the entire line, which shall result in the crowning triumph of your centennial year, and which shall start you in the second century of national existence under the auspicious rule of the great historical Republican party.

HENRY M. HOYT, Chairman.
A. WILSON NORRIS, Sec'y.

The Young Man Who Was "Shook."

"What I want to know," said a white-headed young man of twenty, as he stood before the sergeant in charge of the Central Station, yesterday, "what I came here for was to get some advice."

"Proceed," said the sergeant.

"You know Nancy Thompson, don't you?"

"Never heard of her."

"Well, she's a widder, over forty years old, and I've been boarding there."

"Yes?"

"And we were engaged to be married."

"Whew!" whistled the officer.

"I don't blame you," continued the young man in a broken voice. "I'm only twenty and she's forty, but a man can't always tell when he's going to make a fool of himself."

"And you fell in love?"

"I did that, and as soon as we get through talking I'm going out to hire some one to kick me over to Canada and back! Yes sir, fell dead in love—loved a woman of over forty."

"And what followed?"

"What followed! why, what allers follows? I'm human, same's any body else, and when I love I love like a locomotive on a down grade. What do you think I did in just six weeks by the watch? Went to the theatre sixteen times, out sleighriding twelve times, had three parties, went to three lectures, and took her out to eat oysters ten or eleven times. Fact sir—cost me durn near $200."

"But it was all for love?" replied the sergeant.

"I thought so; and what else did I do? Bought her a $40 watch, a $10 bracelet, a $5 ring, a $7 set of jewelry, a new dress, and give her a $5 gold piece with a hole in it! Yes sir—I drawed $500 from the bank—every red I had—and used it all up on her!"

"And then?"

"She purtended to love back, and when I squoze her hand she smiled and looked heaps of love at me. She'd lean on my arm, talk about Cupid, and git off poetry by the rod, and it was plainly understood that we were to be married in June. Oh, she knew her biz, and she slid around me as the Bengal tiger does around a lamb!"

"Did she break the engagement?"

"Last night," said the young man, swallowing the lump in his throat, "she told me she'd been trifling with me all along. She said she was engaged to another man, and she could never be more than a sister to me. I tell you, sergeant, you could have knocked me down with a straw! I braced up after a while and called her a hypocrite, when she called me a white-headed idiot, and the boarders threw me out of doors. Five hundred dollars gone, and I'm a wrecked man!"

He blew his nose and wiped his eyes, and continued:

"I don't want to drown myself; the water's awful cold, and perhaps I can get over this. I want those presents back, and I'll go to Muskegon and try and forget her. Its wrenched me almost to pieces, and I can never love again. Were you ever shook, Sergeant?"

"No, never."

"Then you don't know the anguish—the griping around the heart. It cuts like a knife, and all I can think of is being laid out in a coffin, my right hand holding a bunch of roses and my left resting on my heart."

"You are young; you may outgrow it."

"I may—I may, but it's so awful sudden, and hits so hard that I feel as if I'd fallen from a house. Go to the house, Sergeant, and see if you can get them things back. If I'm alive I'll be around again to-morrow, and if I don't come you may keep the things for your kindness. I'm white-headed, but I'm tender hearted, and I want to retire behind some barn and set down and think."

And he retired.—Detroit Free Press.

MANHOOD: HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

Just pub'ished, a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, etc.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only six cents.

The celebrated author, in the admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates from a forty years' successful practice that the alarming consequence of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, can be effectually cured, cheaply, privately, and radically.

This book should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Word to Parents in Relation to Our Schools.

All the schools of the county being in operation for another term, a few plain words to parents in regard to their duties in relation to the schools are deemed not inappropriate. Teachers and directors have responsibilities devolving upon them which every person recognizes and expects them to discharge faithfully; but there are equally responsible duties resting on parents and citizens, which, it is to be regretted, are seldom performed. The fact that you pay taxes for school purposes is not an excuse for indifference as to the success of your respective schools. The farmer who hires and pays his laborers will see that he gets the worth of his money by personally superintending their work. If the money you pay in the shape of school taxes is to be applied to the best advantage, you must feel an interest in the schools and do all you can to promote their welfare.

Speak well of your school. If the teacher is not the one you preferred, do not say to your children and your neighbors, that he or she is not fit to teach, for a few such persons in a district will ruin the best school. Keep your opinion to yourself and make the most of the material you have.

Visit your school. If the teacher is competent and interested in his work, he will be pleased to see you come. It will cheer him in his arduous work; it will encourage his pupils to put forth greater efforts when they see that you feel an interest in their advancement. If the teacher is indifferent and his chief concern is to put in his time and draw his salary, then you want to see him. Your presence will spur him up to his duties. He will observe that more is expected of him than merely putting in his time.

Assist your teacher. Offer such suggestions as you think would be of service to him. Assist in making the school-room and surroundings attractive and comfortable. A few old boards brought along on your wagon would be of service in many localities to bridge over muddy places. You can aid your teacher in many ways not necessary to specify here. Do so, and look for no other reward than that which always follows a kind and charitable deed.

Speak well of your teacher if you can, but if you cannot, it is better not to say anything at all. Teachers, as well as directors, are not a public nuisance, which it is the privilege and duty of everybody to abuse, but they are ladies and gentlemen and should be treated as such.

Visit such of your neighbors as do not send their children to school, and if the cause of their staying away is the want of clothing or books, get out a list and raise money to procure these things. You cannot perform a nobler act of charity than this.

Let ministers of the Gospel speak a kind word for the schools in their vicinity. Let them visit the schools and speak a word there. A word fitly spoken to a child will have more effect than fifty sermons to gray hairs. Should these few suggestions be heeded—should ministers, parents and citizens in general, discharge but half their duties in relation to education, our schools would improve a hundred per cent. during the present term.

H. MEYER,
County Superintendent.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Nov. 15, 1875.

MR. EDITOR:—As a former resident of Centre county, I have assumed the privilege of asking you for a small space in the columns of your paper; thus enabling me to place before your readers a short sketch of Ann Arbor and its University.

ANN ARBOR

is a beautiful, though rather ancient and dignified looking, city of some ten thousand inhabitants. It is situated in Washtenaw Co., on the banks of the Huron river; it is built on the highest point of elevation in Mich., sloping to the northwest, presenting to the eye a most commanding and picturesque appearance. Literally speaking, Ann Arbor is a city of trees; the sidewalks and streets being lined with shade trees, mostly maple, which is the crowning point of her beauty, and gives it a most sublime appearance of perfected loveliness, which renders it an object of attraction to all new comers. But the main objects on which Ann Arbor prides herself, are the institutions of learning located within her borders, the principal of which is the University, that colossal seat of education in the northwest, or speaking in a broader sense, of the United States, for every State in the Union is well represented in its various departments.

There are three departments, viz.: Department of Literature, Science, and Arts; Department of Medicine and Surgery, and the Department of Law.

DEPARTMENT OF LITERATURE, SCIENCE AND ARTS.

This department has six full and regular courses of four years each, and two shorter special courses, the regular course comprising the clasical, the scientific, the Latin and scientific, the Greek and scientific. The course in civil engineering, and the course in mining engineering. The two special courses are Chemistry and Pharmacy.

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY.

This department finishes instruction by lectures, continuing over a period of six months. The reputation of this department ranks as one of the best medical institutions of the the land, and the only college in America, requiring all persons to pass a preliminary examination, proposing to enter as students, which resulted in the rejection of some twenty-five or thirty whose examinations proved unsatisfactory to the faculty, this excluding from the profession all those of inferior literary qualifications.

DEPARTMENT OF LAW.

The department of law furnishes instruction also by lectures, the object of which is to enable students to fit themselves for their prospective professional career. This result is accomplished by the moot-courts, which are held every week, and presided over by the Professors, in connection with the lectures. Beside these, the students organize club courts, among themselves, also arranging [illegible] exercises with the [illegible] of the Professors, [illegible] acquire a thorough [illegible] the principles of practice, [illegible] eminently qualifies them to grace the legal profession with honor.

LIBRARIES.

The University Library comprises some 2250, vol., beside 7000 pamphlets. Also 4000 vol. and 5000 pamphlets of foreign literature. The Law library contains over 3,200 vol., and the Medical over 1,500 vol. The reading-room tables are well supplied with American and European periodicals and reviews and papers representing almost every part of the country.

ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATORY.

This building consists of a main part, with a movable dome and two wings, one of which contains the room for the observer, while in the other is mounted the splendid meridian circle, one of the largest and best instruments of the kind, and was imported from Berlin. The same room also contains a sidereal clock and two collimators. The west wing contains a chromograph, with a new isodymanic escapement for recording observations by electro magnetic methods. The description of the museum, I must postpone until my next.

ATTENDANCE.

There are about 500 students in the literature, science and art departments. In the medical there are over 350, 29 of which are lady students; also two male students from Africa and one from Japan. In the law, there are about 290, two of which are ladies. Brigham Young is also represented by one of his numerous family, the pride of Polygamy and Ann Eliza's fear.

I will finish my sketch in my next communication as it is rather lengthy already. Yours respectfully,

H. G. S.

Pennsylvania Official—1875.

The following is the official vote of the State complete. Hartranft's plurality is 12,730; Rawle's plurality, 9,725. The Prohibition vote foots up 13,244 for Browne, and 12,468 for Pennypacker. Both the Republican candidates obtain their election by a minority vote:

EDITOR'S TABLE.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE FOR 1876.—The fact that "The Living Age" soon enters upon its thirty-third year of continuous and successful publication, is a remarkable one in the history of periodicals. And as it is the only thorough and fresh compilation of a current literature which embraces the productions of the ablest living writers in science, fiction, poetry, history, biography, politics, theology, philosophy, criticism, and art, its importance to American readers can hardly be overrated. In no other way, in fact, can so much of the best work of the best minds of the time be obtained so cheaply or conveniently, as through the standard eclectic weekly.

The list of foremost authors of the day represented in its pages, will be found in the prospectus in another column, and is of itself sufficient evidence of the quality of the magazine, while in quantity of reading it is unapproached.

"The Living Age" has always stood at the "head of its class" not only as the best, but all things considered, the cheapest of the eclectics; and since its recent absorbtion of "Every Saturday," is practically without a rival. In the multiplicity of periodicals claiming attention it has become almost a necessity to any person or family of intelligence and taste; for it, alone, furnishes such a compendium of whatever is of immediate interest or permanent value in the literary world as to render it an invaluable economizer of time, labor and money.

For those desiring the cream of both home and foreign literature, the publishers make some combinations with other leading periodicals, by which a subscriber is, at a remarkably small cost, put in possession of the best which the current literature of the world affords. The prospectus should be examined by all in selecting their periodicals for the new year. The volume begins January 1st, but to those remitting now, the intervening weekly numbers are sent gratis.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE FOR DECEMBER, 1875.—"Harper's Magazine" for December is a number of unusual interest, and especially rich in illustration. Probably no more exquisite engravings were ever published in any periodical than those which illustrate the opening article of this number, "Up the Ashley and Cooper." This article will be a new revelation to most readers, showing that even in the New World are to be found old manorial homes worthy of comparison with those of older countries. The result of the publishers' enterprise in securing for this paper so many pictures never hitherto engraved fully justifies the expense involved, and is a significant illustration of the high possibilities of illustrated journalism.

James Parton, in this number, treats of Caricature in the United States, from Benjamin Franklin to Thomas Nast. A portrait of the latter heads the article.

A finely written and beautifully illustrated article describes Windsor Castle, with its superbly decorated State apartments, its picturesque surroundings, and its romantic historical associations.

In "Talks, Walks and Drives, in and around Lex Castle, near Kidderminster, England, in the Summer of 1872," Judge Campbell presents some very interesting facts of Richard Baxter's life. Among the illustrations is one of the monument dedicated last summer to the memory of this celebrated preacher.

James T. Fields concludes his entertaining reminiscences of Barry Cornwall.

A. H. Guernsey narrates the events of "Bloody Mary's" reign—of especial interest in connection with Tennyson's recent drama.

The Hon. S. S. Cox continues his papers on "Legislative Humors," giving some graphic sketches of Reh Hardin, Tom Corwin and Proctor Knott.

A brief but very pleasant and instructive chat on the "Art of Dining" is from the pen of Miss Julie Verplanck.

President Barnard contributes for the "First Century" Series the first part of a comprehensive review of the progress of the exact sciences in this country during the last hundred years.

Julian Hawthorne, in his serial novel, "Garth," goes back to the scene with which the story opened, and from that point resumes the thread of the narrative. This is the most remarkable serial story of the season. Short stories are contributed by James Payn, Virginia W. Johnson, and Mary Beach. Payn's story, "Her Imperial Guest," will amuse all readers.

The poetry of the number is contributed by Paul H. Hayne, R. H. Stoddard, John Swinton and A. F. ——.

The editorial departments are, as usual, full and interesting.

NEW MUSIC.—We have received from the publisher, S. C. Upham, 25 South Eighth street, Philadelphia, a new piece of music, entitled "Hard Times." The music is pluntive and melodious, and the words characteristic of the times. The publisher will mail a copy to any address on receipt of 30 cents. Sold by all news dealers.

Bellefonte Markets.

BELLEFONTE, NOV. 24, 1875.

There seems to be no abatement in the competition among our business men, each contending for the lion's share of trade, keeping in view the importance of selling for cash or on short time.

WHEAT—The wheat market West and East has been very weak since our last report, but there has been a demand at fair prices for all good wheat offered in our market. As to the future, it is impossible to predict whether prices will go up or down. The crop at the West has been very much damaged by rain and floods. We notice that there is a very large amount of damaged and sprouted wheat offered in the Eastern market. Buyers are very indifferent about buying white wheat. Eastern millers prefer our red grades to white, this year, if well cleaned. They object very much to the white cups in the Foltz wheat.

CORN—Our dealers have hopes of being able to market the surplus of our corn crop East at tolerable fair prices, when it can be shelled. There is considerable old corn in the county yet, which must be sold at a discount, as compared with prices six months ago.

OATS—The market is well supplied at our quotations, but farmers are very reluctant to sell at such low figures.

CLOVERSEED—There is some seed moving at our quotations. It is said that the quality is very good, and if well cleaned will bring full prices. Some of our town buyers are offering a shade higher in cash than we quote, but $5 50 per bushel of 64 pounds seems to be the market price.

HAY—There is some demand for hay, but prices vary according to quality.

STRAW—There is some straw wanted for stable use at fair prices.

PORK—There is a fair demand for pork, but the supply in Centre county can hardly be computed above the amount that will be required for local consumption. There were a few hogs sold last week for shipment at 7c per pound on foot. 8c per pound is being offered for dressed hogs. Old meat is scarce and high, and it is said that the supply of pork at the West will not come up to the average. 8c per pound for pork is the reported price in Ohio.

APPLES—The supply of good apples is limited, which retail in our town at $1 00 per bushel—a dear bite.

POTATOES—A big crop and everybody supplied.

Harper's Bazar.
ILLUSTRATED.

Notices of the press.

The BAZAR is edited with a combination of tact and talent that we seldom find in any journal; and the journal itself is the organ of the great world of fashion.—[Boston Traveller.

The BAZAR commends itself to every member of the household—to the children by droll and pretty pictures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates in endless variety, to the provident matron by its patterns for the children's clothes, to paterfamilias by its tasteful designs, for embroidered slippers and luxurious dressing-gowns. But the reading matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fireside enjoyment it affords.—[N. Y. Evening Post.

In its way there is nothing like it. Fresh and trustworthy as a fashion guide, its stories and essays, its poetry and squibs, are all invigorating to the mind.—[Chicago Evening Journal.

THE WEEKLY SUN

1776. NEW YORK. 1876.

Eighteen hundred and seventy-six is the Centennial year. It is also the year in which an Opposition House of Representatives, the first since the war, will be in power at Washington; and the year of the twenty-third election of a President of the United States. All of these events are sure to be of great interest and importance, especially the two latter; and all of them and everything connected with them will be fully and freshly reported and expounded in THE SUN.

The Opposition House of Representatives, taking up the line of inquiry opened years ago by THE SUN, will sternly and diligently investigate the corruptions and misdeeds of Grant's administration; and will, it is to be hoped, lay the foundation for a new and better period in our national history. Of all this THE SUN will contain complete and accurate accounts, furnishing the readers with early and trustworthy information upon these absorbing topics.

The twenty-third Presidential election, with the preparations for it, will be memorable as deciding upon Grant's aspirations for a third term of power and plunder, and still more as deciding who shall be the candidate of the party of reform, and as electing that candidate. Concerning all these subjects, those who read THE SUN will have the constant means of being thoroughly well informed.

The WEEKLY SUN, which has attained a circulation of over eighty thousand copies, already has its readers in every State and Territory, and we trust that the year 1876 will see their numbers doubled. It will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the general news of the day will be found in it, condensed, when unimportant, at full length when of moment; and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world, and we shall continue to give in its columns a large amount of miscellaneous reading, such as stories, tales, poems, scientific intelligence and agricultural information, for which we are not able to make room in our daily edition. The agricultural department especially is one of its prominent features. The fashions are also regularly reported in its columns; and so are the markets of every kind.

The WEEKLY SUN, eight pages with fifty-six broad columns, is only $1 20 cents a year, postage prepaid. As this price barely repays the cost of the paper, no discount can be made from this rate to clubs, agents, postmasters, or anyone.

THE DAILY SUN, a large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns, gives all the news for two cents a copy. Subscription, postage prepaid, 55 cents a month, or $6 50 a year. SUNDAY edition extra, $1 10 per year. We have no traveling agents. Address,

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE

In 1876 the Living Age enters upon its thirty-third year. It has never failed to receive the warmest support of the best journals in the country, and has met with constantly increasing success. Having recently absorbed its younger competitor, "EVERY SATURDAY," it is now without a rival in its special field.

A weekly magazine of sixty-four pages, it gives more than double-column octavo pages of reading matter yearly, forming four large volumes. It presents in an inexpensive form, considering its great amount of matter, with freshness, owing to its weekly issue, and with a satisfactory completeness attempted by no other publication, the best Essays, Reviews, Criticisms, Tales, Sketches of Travel and Discovery, Poetry, Scientific, Biographical, Historical and Political Information, from the entire body of Foreign Periodical Literature.

Three and a Quarter Thousand

During the coming year, the serial and short stories of the

will be given, together with an amount UNAPPROACHED BY ANY OTHER PERIODICAL IN THE WORLD, of the best literary and scientific matter of the day, from the pens of the above named, and many other Foremost living Essayists, Scientists, Critics, Discoverers, and Editors, representing every department of knowledge and progress.

The importance of THE LIVING AGE to every American reader, as the only satisfactorily fresh and COMPLETE compilation of an indispensable current literature—indispensable because it embraces the productions of

The Ablest Living Writers

in all branches of Literature, Science, Art, and Politics—is sufficiently indicated by the following recent

OPINIONS:

"Ought to find a place in every American Home."—[N. Y. Times.

"In no other single publication can there be found so much of sterling literary excellence."—[N. Y. Evening Post.

"It reproduces the best thoughts of the best minds of the civilized world, upon all topics of living interest."—[Philadelphia Inquirer.

"The best of all our eclectic publications."—[The Nation, New York.

"And the cheapest. A monthly that comes every week."—[The Advance, Chicago.

"Fairly without a rival."—[Congregationalist, Boston.

"A pure and perpetual reservoir and fountain of entertainment and instruction."—[Hon. Robert C. Winthrop.

The Horse Disease.

The veterinary editor of the Buffalo Live Stock Journal does not believe the disease now so prevalent among the horses is the same that swept over the land three years ago. The doctor's letter upon the subject is of peculiar interest at the present time. He says: "The disease which prevails among our horses at present seems to assume a more serious character than was at first anticipated. The first symptoms were of so mild a nature as to cause little or no apprehension of danger from the disease in a later stage, for a great many horses in this vicinity, which have had the usual symptoms, (cough) are apparently in good health, and are performing their daily work. There is, however, a large number wholly unfit for use, it having assumed a much more dangerous form. Horses which apparently had entirely recovered from the former symptoms are now stricken down with pleurisy. It is the belief of many horsemen that the present disease is a mild type of the epizootic of 1872. In my diagnosis of the present disease I find few symptoms which are similar to the disease of 1872. In the first place, the present disease is wholly epidemic, as there are many horses which have not yet been affected. From the disease of 1872 none escaped. [Some horses in Chester county did, however.] 2d, mules are not troubled with the present disease, but were equally affected in 1872. 3d, the first symptcms of the present disease are a hacking cough, with little or no discharge from the nostrils, while in 1872, the first symptoms were a copious discharge of mucus, of a greenish hue, from both nostrils, with inflammation of the eyes, which also discharged a watery mucus, general inflammation of the head, more or less soreness of the throat, and, in many cases, a difficulty in swallowing, with loss of appetite, etc. 4th, in severe attacks of the present disease, its last symptoms are swellings or deposits of lymph in the extremities, commencing in the feet and extending upward toward the belly; also at the nose and extending back over the face. In the former disease the swellings were dropsical and the deposits serum, commencing on the belly and extending downward toward the feet. 5th. the present disease has no particular time of its appearance among our horses, nor has it shown any symptoms of abating. Horses have been brought to my infirmary to be treated for cough for over a month. The former disease first made its appearance, in this city, at Doctor Carey's stables on the 14th of October, and remained about four weeks. In my opinion, the present disease is epidemic influenza, affecting the larnyx first, and when the animal is not taken care of and kept warm, the lungs and chest become the principal seats of the disease. The disease is now assuming a very dangerous character. Too many horses, which were considered well and cured, are now attacked with pleuro-pneumonia. Horses which are compelled to do so much work daily, and in all kinds of weather, suffer most. The street-car horses are suffering severely from pleurisy, and so many of them are sick that the full number of cars cannot be run."

Seasonable Hints

Josiah Hoopes, West Chester, in the New York Tribune, gives the following among other seasonable suggestions for fall work: A bed sown with spinach, which, upon the advent of freezing weather, should be covered with a thin coating of straw, will give the owner many an enjoyable meal in advance of any other fresh crop. A few plants of lettuce set out on a warm, sunny slope, on the side of ridges, will be ready for cutting very early, and will be acceptable to almost every one. Onions, planted late in the fall, make early greens, as to or three warm days after the frost is out start them into growth. All such crops will be the better for a thin coating of straw.

Whatever rural work we can perform this fall is that much off our hands when spring work will be pressing. The garden should be carefully cleared of old vines and refuse litter of every description; the bean poles and pea sticks should be cleared and put away for next year's campaign; the soil ought to be manured and dug over, and the surface suffered to remain in ridges to be acted upon by the frost.

It is in autumn that the orchardist should ascertain if the "borer" is at work, and in a large number of cases he is, and can be readily found and dislodged. The novice who has yet to be introduced to this unwelcome neighbor, may readily find him at home by searching carefully around the bodies of the trees, close to the surface of the ground, and occasionally, just beneath the soil. A little mass of gum and chips, or dust, generally serve to render his whereabouts known, and a short wire pushed into the hole, if the trees have been neglected, will, in most cases, destroy him; but if annually performed, a sharp-pointed knife soon brings him to light.

Some of the wise savants knowingly shake their heads, and venture the prediction that more than one nurseryman will have good peach trees to burn next spring. They base their prognostications on two points: First, the general stagnation of business, and secondly, the ruinous price of fruit. How near these predictions may prove true, is as yet an uncertainty; but a wise man would seize upon just such circumstances to increase his orchards. When orchardists stop planting, owing to the low price of fruit, he who is preparing for the future, reaps the benefit of his forethought at a time when he will have but few competitors. Another feature about this business is, that stagnation in business causes a depression in the price of trees, and an orchard can be purchased for a far less sum of money than in ordinary brisk times. Altogether, the present season is one of the years that seldom occur for the shrewd fruit-grower to improve.

Good Cows.

The largest record yield of milk of a single cow that is perfectly well authenticated, is that of an animal kept at the jail in Lewis, England.

She was milked one year 321 days and gave 1,280 gallons, which made 540 pounds of butter, or, at the rate of one pound of butter to 22 pounds of milk.

A Mr. Scott, of Shaftesburg, Vermont, had a cow whose milk yielded 504 pounds of butter in 1866, or, at the rate of one pound of butter to twenty pounds of milk.

An Ayrshire cow recently yielded 309½ pounds of butter in ten months after calving, or between March 10th, 1866, and January 10th, 1867, besides supplying a family with milk and cream.

The Best Farmer.

The best farmer is he who raises the largest and best crops on the smallest surface of land, at the least expense, and at the same time, annually improves his soil; who understands his business and attends to it; whose corn crib and smoke house are at home; who is surrounded by all the necessaries of life; who studies his profession, and strives to reach perfection in it; who keeps a strict account of all his outgoes as well as his incomes, and who knows how he stands at the end of each season. Such a farmer, in nine times out of ten, will succeed, and not only make farming a pleasant, but profitable occupation. Try it, and see how it is yourself, reader.

The usually staid and sober agricultural editor of the Iowa Register facetiously says that the "outer" breed of hogs has frequently been spoken of in the papers. We have lately understood the meaning. It is a breed which have the ears in the middle of the back. All front of the ears is snout; all back of the ears is tail. They are raised to make head cheese and souse.

Gather up the farm tools and carefully put them away for another year. Remember, there is as much made in saving as there is in making. The tool that would wear out in a year or two, if left exposed, when protected with shelter and other care, will last you to raise several additional crops.

Plants, when first housed, should be kept well watered. After being indoors for a few weeks a rearrangement and cleansing out will do much good. Before planting in winter quarters divest them of all decaying leaves and insects.

To measure grain, find the number of cubic feet, from which deduct one fifth. The remainder is the number of bushels—allowing, however, one bushel extra to every 224. Thus, in a remainder of 448 there would be 450 bushels, etc.

Miscellaneous.

The Reason Why.

BY QUIBBLE.

Some years ago I met a maid,
So fair, and I loved her so;
When I asked her aught she always said:
"I really can't say no!"

One day I met her in the street,
And I asked with her to go;
She whispered as she looked so sweet,
"I really can't say no!"

One night I tried to steal a kiss,
And I feared 'twould be no go;
But soon she said, "'Twon't go amiss,
And I really can't say no!"

One summer eve, the moon shone bright,
And we took a walk you know;
When I proposed, she said, "All right,
I really can't say no!"

Now this is why so many girls
Grow old in single woe;
When men propose, they shake their curls,
And really can say no!"

Last Wednesday's Excursion.

Pittsburg Capitalists Visit the Largest Gas Wells in the World.

An excursion train containing a party, consisting of the leading Pittsburg and Allegbany capitalists arrived in the town about 4 P. M., last Wednesday. Carriages were in waiting at the depot, and the whole party were soon on their way to the great gas wells in Donegal township. The Burn's well was the first one reached, and the party for some time had been conscious of a roaring like almost to Niagara, as they journeyed on, suddenly stopped, at a point where at one side an open field stretched down to the base of a wooded hill, along the side of which sudden flashes of blaze came, and were in mereotic quickness a the wind played with the burning gas of a score of derricks. In a moment there was a flash and blazing out in jets, from a frame work which had previously been concealed by the darkness, where shown the words, "Use Me, I am Wasting." A minute afterward, as the carriages stopped and the party commenced to alight, fire was applied to six three-inch pipes, and from each sprang up into the air a torrent of flame, roaring and cracking, as if struggling to break away from the earth. This was the famous Burn's well, that is giving forth fuel at the rate (by practical comparison) of 50,000 bushels of coal per day. An half hour here and then, with carriages, having taken a drive of a mile further, brought the party to the Delemater well, the light from which had been in sight for several miles. This is the most remarkable of the two. Its production is nearly double that of Burn's well, and by it the whole neighborhood, including the town of St. Joe, is supplied with light and fuel. The well is situated in a valley walled about with towering hills which throw back and thus concentrate the light which emanates from the burning gas. Out of this gas well several pipes extend. One leads directly to the cylinder of a large engine, and by its pressure runs it at an immense speed. From the escape-pipe a solid volume of flame puffs out, just as if, had steam been used, it would exhaust itself in fire instead of vapor. Another pipe near the engine house pours out another flame sufficient to melt as much iron ore as half the blast furnaces of Pittsburg produce each day. But twenty yards away is the largest outlet of the well. From a three-inch pipe a column of flame reaches forty feet in the air, and the roar shakes the hills about. Within a radius of fifty feet is charred earth; outside of that for one hundred feet, the grass grows with the tropical richness and profusion of perpetual summer.

Scientific examinations show that what condensed would be one hundred thousand bushels of coal, is consumed at the end of these pipes each twenty-four hours. After examining the whole locality, a hurried visit was made to St. Joe, where every house is lighted and heated with gas from the Delemater, and thence back to Butler, the carriages went as fast as the tired horse flesh could draw them. On the return trip two of the carriages broke down, and some of their occupants had to walk, while the others rode the carriage horses. These slight accidents were the only things which occurred to mar the trip. General Negley, Captain R. C. Gray and Campbell B. Herron, Esq., however, had a spotted mare in their team, which was altogether too handy with its heels, and succeeded in enlivening their ride, and plentifully bespattering them with the sacred soil of the land of buckwheat and soap mines.

At nine o'clock the excursionists assembled in the dining room of the Lowry House, where mine hosts Cross and McOmber had spread a repast of delicacies and substantials which was most welcome after a long fast, and a drive through mist and mud. Everybody ate heartily, thus testifying their appreciation of the Lowry House cuisine.

After the removal of the cloth, Josiah King, Esq., was called to the chair, and made a short address, saying among other things, that he had been wonderfully interested in what he had seen at the gas wells, and was convinced that this latest discovery would be of great benefit to the industries of Pittsburg.

Mr. David Kirk, one of the hosts of the occasion, next arose. He gave a history of the gas wells visited, and of others in the oil region. The first question raised when it was proposed to send this gas through tubes to Pittsburgh was, is the pressure at the well great enough to force it that distance? That question has been answered by practical test, and now inquiry is made as to the duration of the supply. Wells in the upper oil region had been discharging gas for twelve years, with no perceptible diminution of the flow. One at Fairview had for five years supplied fuel for more than one hundred engines, and the flow is as great now as when the well was struck. There was a large belt of territory in Butler county, extending in a direct line to the Alleghany river at a point just above the Sharpsburg bridge, where no well had ever been put down without finding an abundant supply of gas. This gas was condensed heat in its most portable shape. If it can be introduced into the industrial establishments of Pittsburgh, a saving of at least $2,000,000 a year in the item of coal will be made. Mr. Kirk here waxed enthusiastic, and said, calling on his auditors to mark his words, that within one year from this time a majority of the furnaces and mills of Pittsburgh, as well as the parlor grates and cooking-stoves and ranges in the kitchen, will be heated by this new fuel.

After fully explaining the expectations of the Natural Gas Company, Mr. Kirk asked for remarks from some of the manufacturing gentlemen who were present. Speeches were made by Mr. C. Zuz, Mr. Lewis, Geo. Berry and Jas. Negley, all of whom expressed their satisfaction at the sight they had witnessed and the prospect which pointed to cheap fuel to Pittsburg. Mr. Weeks, editor of the American Manufacturer, then spoke, and he thought the question between capital and labor had been solved by this discovery. What was needed to the iron trade of Pittsburgh and of the county was the power to supply foreign markets. By means of this gas as fuel, mill owners could afford to pay workmen a living price for their labor and still make iron so cheap and of such fine quality that a large export trade could be built up. The speaker declared that careful experiments had shown how superior the iron made by the use of gas was.

Afterwards speeches were made by Messrs. Thompson, McCandless, Negley and Mitchell, all of whom expressed great pleasure in meeting such representative men of the city, and were proud of the fact that Butler county had developed a resource that would prove a benefit to her neighbor Pittsburgh. They felt themselves almost in the suburbs of the city, and were deeply interested in her welfare. Butler would take hold of the enterprise and hoped the capitalists of Pittsburgh would take hold of it with them.

After other remarks, during which it was shown that a pipe line of only thirty-one miles in length was required to carry the gas to the city, and that the work could be promtly done, the meeting adjourned, and the visitors sought the cars, by which they were soon landed in the city. It is understood that as a result of the visit stock has been liberally subscribed, and although there is considerable left, enough money has been guaranteed to warrant the work ing at once commenced.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

In the name and by the authority of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

In the abundant crops with which Heaven has blessed us, in the absence of pestilence and want from our midst, in the diminishing distrust that pervades the channels of trade, and the prospect not only of a revival of commerce and manufactures throughout all the states of the country, but of a happy and cordial reunion of the people thereof, the nation has occasion for thankfulness.

I respectfully ask, therefore, that the people of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the recommendation of the President of the United States, assemble on the 25th day of November, 1875, to give thanks to the Great Author of all our blessings, and to petition for the continuance of the Divine favor to the nation and State.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State, at Harrisburg, this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and of the Commonwealth the one hundredth.

JOHN F. HARTRANFT.

By the Governor:
M. S. QUAY,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Just after the trial of a petty case, in which one Hank Fisher was a witness, three or four of the lawyers were discussing among themselves the variety of testimony deduced, when General B., with his usual vehemence, said: "There never was such a liar on the witness stand as that Hank Fisher; he is undoubtedly the biggest liar I ever knew;" when the whole party were somewhat abashed at seeing Hank, who heard the General's remark, step up to him. "Did you say I was the biggest liar you ever saw?" "That is about what I said," stammeringly came from the General, who expected a fight. Hank eyed him for a moment, and then said: "I guess you didn't know my brother John."—[Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise.

VEGETINE

—WILL CURE—

SCROFULA,

SCROFULOUS HUMOR.

Vegetine will eradicate from the system every taint of Scrofula and Scrofulous Humor. It has permanently cured thousands in Boston and vicinity who had been long and painful sufferers.

CANCER, CANCEROUS HUMOR.

The marvelous effect of Vegetine in case of Cancer and Cancerous Humor challenges the most profound attention of the medical faculty, many of whom are prescribing Vegetine to their patients.

CANKER.

Vegetine has never failed to cure the most inflexible case of Canker.

MERCURIAL DISEASES.

The Vegetine meets with wonderful success in the cure of this class of diseases.

PAIN IN THE BONES.

In this complaint the Vegetine is the great remedy, as it removes from the system the producing cause.

SALT RHEUM.

Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, etc., will certainly yield to the great alterative effects of Vegetine.

ERYSIPELAS.

Vegetine has never failed to cure the most inveterate case of Erysipelas.

PIMPLES AND HUMORS OF THE FACE.

Reason should teach us that a blotchy, rough or pimpled skin depends entirely upon an internal cause, and no outward application can ever cure the defect. Vegetine is the great blood purifier.

TUMORS, ULCERS OR OLD SORES

Are caused by an impure state of the blood. Cleanse the blood thoroughly with Vegetine, and these complaints will disappear.

CATARRH.

For this complaint the only substantial benefit can be obtained through the blood. Vegetine is the great blood purifier.

CONSTIPATION.

Vegetine does not act as a cathartic to debilitate the bowels, but cleanses all the organs, enabling each to perform the functions devolving upon them.

PILES.

Vegetine has restored thousands to health who have been long and painful sufferers.

DYSPEPSIA.

If Vegetine is taken regularly, according to directions, a certain and speedy cure will follow its use.

FAINTNESS AT THE STOMACH.

Vegetine is not a stimulating bitters which creates a fictitious appetite, but a gentle tonic, which assists nature to restore the stomach to a healthy action.

FEMALE WEAKNESS.

Vegetine acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, and allays inflammation.

GENERAL DEBILITY.

In this complaint the good effects of the Vegetine are realized immediately after commencing to take it; as debility denotes deficiency of the blood, and Vegetine acts directly upon the blood. 44-6t

MEDICAL.

Wright's Rejuvenating Elixer.

For the restoration of Nature's forces. It gives new life and vigor to the aged, and causes the blood of youth to course through the veins. It effectually cures Impotency, Palpitation of the Heart, Loss of Muscular Power, Low Spirits, Disorganization of the Generative Organs, and all the train of ills that follow in the path of the transgressor of Nature's laws. Price $2 per bottle.

It will be readily understood that in the brief pace afforded by the advertising columns of a public print, it is impossible to give all particulars of the diseases that may be cured by the CHEROKEE MEDICINES. That they are destined to become immensely popular is plainly obvious in consequence of their

GREAT INTRINSIC MERIT.

The pamphlet and circulars that accompany the medicines give all the information which cannot be given here, and the remedies may be had of any respectable druggist.

Fashion, Literature, and Art.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"How a Journal of Fashion can combine fashion and literature at very low terms is well shown by this periodical. The May number, besides a colored Fashion Plate, has thirty-six pages, profusely illustrated, on the fashions of costumes for ladies and children, seasonable fabrics, trimmings, millinery, lingerie, coiffures, and domestic art, and yet with all this there is room for poems and tales, by popular authors, notices of new books, etc., and the price of all this matter is only $1.50 per annum. Take it all in all, we know of no periodical of which readers get so much for their money as those of the 'DOMESTIC' MONTHLY."—N. Y. Evening Mail.

"If one wishes the latest information concerning the latest fashions, the 'DOMESTIC' MONTHLY is ready with the intelligence, aided by abundant illustrations. It does not, however, neglect current literature, as it contains poems, a serial story, some interesting miscellany, and art notes."—N. Y. World.

"It combines literary merit with a great deal of information in regard to ladies' costumes, fabrics, toilettes, etc. It is plentifully illustrated in its fashion articles, and its list of contributions is deserving of much praise."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"A far better periodical than many of the so-called weekly papers."—Terrebonne Republican, Houma, La.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping-Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attacks of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.

TASTELES MEDICINES.

A prominent New York physician lately complained to DUNDAS DICK & CO. about their Sandalwood Oil Capsules, stating that sometimes they cured miraculously, but that a patient of his had taken them without effect. On being informed that several imitations were sold, he inquired and found his patient had not been taking DUNDAS DICK & CO'S.

What happened to this physician may have happened to others, and DUNDAS DICK & CO. take this method of protecting physicians, druggists and themselves, and preventing Oil of Sandalwood from coming into disrepute.

PHYSICIANS who once prescribe the Capsules will continue to do so, for they contain the Pure Oil in the best and cheapest form.

DUNDAS DICK & CO. use more Oil of Sandalwood than all the Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Perfumers in the United States combined, and this is the sole reason why the pure oil is sold Cheaper in their Capsules than in any other form.

OIL OF SANDALWOOD is fast superseding every other remedy, sixty Capsules only being required to insure a safe and certain cure in six or eight days. From no other medicine can this result be had.

DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S SOFT CAPSULES solve the problem, long considered by eminent physicians, of how to avoid the nausea and disgust experienced in swallowing, which are well known to detract from, if not destroy, the good effects of many valuable remedies.

Soft Capsules are put up in tin-foil and neat boxes, thirty in each, and are the only Capsules prescribed by physicians.

Tasteless Medicines.—Caster Oil and many other nauseous medicines can be taken easily and safely in Dundas Dick & Co's Soft Capsules. No taste. No smell.

——Fat turkeys are in the market at eight cents per pound.

——New figs, prunes and raisins at Sechler's, opposite our office.

——The trees are leafless, and their trunks are waiting to be checked through to spring.

——We are glad to announce that the board walk along Water street has been well and durably repaired. Thanks.

——Full suits made to order at prices so low as to defy competition, at John Montgomery's, No. 7 Brockerhoff Row.

——A party of young folks from this place will attend the festival at Howard to-morrow evening.

——Prepare for Thanksgiving by buying your groceries at Sechler's. He keeps none but the best.

——The show windows of our dry goods and fancy stores are presenting a handsome appearances.

——The "nobbiest," newest, neatest overcoats that go round the town are bought from John Montgomery's, No. 7 Brockerhoff Row.

——Mr. Samuel F. Foster's farm in Pennsvalley, containing 117 acres of the best land in the valley, will be sold to-morrow.

——An ugly little machine called a "jointer," in Hoover, Harris & Co.'s saw-mill, Philipsburg, took Wm. Arnott's thumb off on Tuesday last.

——What will the girls who wear pin-backs do when slippery weather comes? Just think of a slip,—a fall, a tear,—oh!

——Did you ever see a man going to the depot but what, if the cars were approaching, he pulled out his watch to see if the train was not a little ahead of time?

——An extensive revival has been going on in Rev. M. L. Smyser's church, at Philipsburg. One hundred persons have united with the church, and the good work is still going on.

——Don't sit still and growl about the hard winter that is approaching. Husband your resources, and systematize your charities, and it may not prove so hard after all.

——There seems to be a general expectation that the present winter will be one of great religious interest; and if the interest is only healthy and wholesome, we shall be glad to experience and witness its increase.

——The streets are getting dry and in good condition again, and the ladies do not find it so unpleasant to step off the pavements into the gutters, in order to avoid the scores of cows that prefer to occupy the sidewalks.

——Four deer were hauled through town in a two-horse wagon on Saturday. Their heads hung out over the tail-board and attracted crowds of spectators. They were killed in the Green Woods by hunters from Pennsvalley.

——The Journal says that Philipsburg will soon have a good library and reading room, after the plan of ours, we suppose. When you get fully under way, Mr. Ellsworth, let us know, and we'll challenge your best checker players to a match game with our champions.

——Sechler & Co. have lately received a large shipment of New York apples of the very best quality, which they are selling off very fast. All who have not laid in their winter stock should call and see Sechler's. They are a fine lot, we know, because we bought some of them ourselves.

——Our neighbors at the other end of the row seem to feel it to be their duty to shower upon us weekly, and weakly, doses of advise. It appears that we do not publish anything any more that pleases them; and they spend a great deal of time and space in expressing their disapprobation. Now, if they only knew that we don't write to please them particularly, and that we don't care a straw whether they like or dislike what we write, perhaps they would not spend three-fourths of their time in foolish criticism. Still, if it pleases you, go ahead, boys, you should have something to occupy your time.

A Spotted Horse.—Professor Aaron Burch, an itinerant gentleman of German parentage, who is agent for a celebrated organ company, has been basely treated by some of the wicked young men of Bellefonte. The Prof. uses a horse and spring wagon to haul his organs around. His loads are rather heavy, and demand the strength of a good horse, over the rough roads of Centre county. The one formerly owned by Mr. Burch had almost outlived his usefulness, and from much birching and hard pulling had declined rapidly since he set foot on our turnpikes. Indeed, Aaron's rod no longer availed in facilitating the speed of the animal, but only increased his dejected appearance and down-cast bearing. The Prof. found that a change was necessary, if he would drive his business with his wonted energy. He finally found a man with a black horse, with whom he traded. The black rosanaute suited him—could not have filled the bill better if gotten up to order.

The horse was as black as Erebus; he had fire in his eye and metal in his heel. The Professor was delighted. He spent hours in recounting his noble qualities and graceful disposition. Everybody at the hotel knew about that horse, because the Professor had told them over and over again. It soon became apparent that the man of music was not up in the science of horse, for the fun-loving, wicked young men about the hotel made him believe some terrible things about horses. One of them had a beautiful dappled grey that turned jetty black in a night; another had a horse that could neither be ridden, driven, nor lead. He kicked down all the barns he ever entered, and nobody could do a thing with him, until the vile young men aforesaid got hold of him. "How did you conquer him?" asked the Prof. "Why, I swallowed him where he stood," said the speaker, "and then sat down on him." Astonishment overspread the German's face, but still it did not move him, as did the story about the white horse turning black in a night. True, he had only been in this country but a few months and had not learned much of the ways of the people, but it was so in the old country. He however came to the conclusion that he was in a strange part of the world, and that his black steed was liable to turn white or blue or green, any time.

The next morning he ordered the hostler to bring out his horse and wagon, as he desired to take a drive into the country. When he stepped to the door to admire his horse, lo! what a change was here, my countrymen. His beautiful black was all covered with white spots. On his flanks were white flakes resembling the clouds of summer; a white streak ornamented his face from top-knot to nose. He was now a bald-faced animal, owned by a bawl-faced man. Flakes ranging in sizes from dinner-plates down to water-crackers were spread promiscuously over the animal. He looked gay and reckless, and attached to the organ-wagon, might have been easily mistaken for the out-fit of an advance agent for a circus.

The Professor was all undone. When he found that no freak of nature had worked the miracle, his amazement turned to rage. It was white paint! Revenge took possession of his heart. He very correctly got it into his intellect that the case fell under the province of the S. P. C. A., and he sought Col. D. G. Bush, who is vice-president of that humane society. The Colonel advised him to find the offenders, make information against them, and bring them speedily to justice. Prof. Aaron Burch swore out a warrant and brought near a dozen young men before Justice Gephart on Friday evening. District Attorney Spangler appeared for the prosecution and C. M. Bower, Esq., for the boys. The hearing was long and searching, but no evidence was found sufficient to point with any certainty to the guilty party. They were discharged, those [illegible] boys; and the Professor still drives his variegated rosanaute, and attracks more gratuitous attention than any traveling agent in the country. He was treated shamefully, and likewise his horse, and we are truly sorry the guilty fellows were not soundly punished for their cruel fun.

——We know that a great many of our readers have been to S. & A. Loeb, to "see what money will do," but if any there be who have neglected it, they should go at once, for a dollar will last longer at Loebs' than any other place we know of. Only think of it, a full suit of clothes for eight dollars. Calico for three cents a yard? Is not this bidding defiance to hard times? What do you think of it, farmers of Centre county? When a bushel of wheat will buy forty yards of calico, you can make dresses for your whole family with the price of a bushel of wheat. You are all growling about the price of your wheat, but how is it with the man who makes you forty yards of cloth to pay for it, and one of the firm informed us that they had not touched bottom yet. One thing is certain; it will be to your interest to go to Loebs', on Allegheny street, and "see what money will do."

——There will be services to-morrow in all the churches.

——A new lodge of I. O. of O. F. was instituted at Houtzdale on the 10th ultimo.

——Smokers who are in town attending court should try Sechler's nice cigars.

——The horse and buggy stolen from the livery stable of John C. Rote, has not been heard from.

——A Young Men's Christian Association is about to be organized in Centre Hall.

——We feel really concerned about the Industrial Advocate. Won't somebody send us an old number?

"Our Goodly Heritage"—Is the text of a sermon to be delivered to-morrow (Thanksgiving) in the M. E. Church, by Rev. G. W. Miller.

——A new bridge is to be built across the Susquehanna, at Lock Haven. Aaron J. Kline, of Jersey Shore, has the contract at $12,951.20.

——Follow your children's noses and put them to bed at dark, and don't let them roam the streets, and you'll sleep sounder yourselves when your children are grown up.

——Fabulous representations of merchandise have no application to the goods sold by Sechler & Co., opposite our office, although their prices seem fabulously moderate.

——It is said that 18,000,000 hogs will be slaughtered this year. And a half dozen boys will gather around at the death of each one, and quarrel to see who'll have the bladder.

——A merchant in Philipsburg named Flegal, was arrested, brought before the Burgess and fined for driving upon his own sidewalk to unload coal. Mr. F. refuses to pay the fine, and the courts will decide the matter.

——"Doubtless God could have made a better berry than the strawberry, but doubtless God never did," says an old writer; and taking the liberty of paraphrasing, doubtless Fred Kurtz may have furnished his readers with a stupider paper than he did last week, but doubtless he never did.

The Governor at The State College.—Governor Hartranft will visit the State College on Friday, Dec. 10th, for the purpose of inspecting that institution. He will arrive in Bellefonte on Thursday, the 9th inst., and remain as the guest of General Beaver until the following day. He will be accompanied by General Latta and other members of his staff. It is expected that a large number of visitors from different parts of the State will be present at the College on that day.

Remember This.—Now is the time the year for Pneumonia, lung fever coughs, colds, and fatal results of predisposition to consumption and other throat and lung diseases. Boschee's German Syrup has been used in this neighborhood for the past two or three years without a single failure to cure. If you have not used this medicine yourself, go to your druggists, F. P. Green, and J. Zellers & Son, and ask them of its wonderful success among his customers. Two doses will relieve the worst case. If you have no faith in any medicine, just buy a sample bottle of Boschee's German Syrup for 10 cents and try it, regular size bottle, 75 cents. Don't neglect a cough to save 75 cents.

41-eow.

——This is the season for bad colds and weddings; and, speaking of the latter here, is a list of reflections that may be valuable:

According to the old joke, married people are often like little boys bathing, who cry with chattering teeth to the boys on the shore, "Do come in, it's so warm;" but it is not always warm. There is no sadder picture—if it were not such an every-day picture—than two young people, married perhaps for love, at any rate for liking, but married in haste, to repent at leisure; which they piteously do. Knowing little or nothing of each other's temper, taste, character, they slowly wake up to find these so diverse that it was morally impossible they could have been happy for very long; and here they are, tied together, in the most intimate union that life allows, forever. A thought absolutely maddening at first, and with people of sensitive or impulsive natures, I fear, if we could look into our neighbors' hearts, the catalouge of suicides never committed, of elopements unaccomplished, even of unperpetrated murders, would be, to those who see no difference between the thought and the act, something startling, nay appalling.

But these tragedies do not happen—at least not often. They drop into "genteel comedy." "Can two walk together, unless they are agreed?" Very many couples are not "agreed:" far from it; yet seeing they must walk together somehow, they make up their minds to do it, and they do do it. Aye, in spite of good-natured friends, who can not help observing how unhappy they are, and perhaps how happy they might both have been if each had been married to a different sort of a person. But this is not the case; they are married to the person whom they themselves chose, or fate chose for them. The thing is done, and there is no undoing it.

Personals.—Charley Cooke, now agent for Chalfant, Jones & Co., notion dealers in Philadelphia, is at home on a visit. Charley Cooke is a first-class salesman.

—Mr. James C. Williams accompanies Charles McCafferty to West Virginia, and will be a sub-contractor on the Kanawa river navigation improvement.

—Mayor Bridgens, Cline G. Furst, Esq., Charles Corse, Esq., and other prominent Lock Haven gentlemen were in town on Friday.

—James Lewis Loder, of whose accident we reported in last week's Republican, died at his home in Howard township on Wednesday last from the effects of injuries he received by a tree falling on him.

—Prof. John Hamilton and wife have returned from their bridal tour, and the Professor has resumed his duties at the State College.

—Col. Robert H. Duncan was in to see us on Monday. He had too much business on his mind to say a word about the election or anything else.

—S. D. Ball, Esq., of Lock Haven, and Hon. George F. Miller, president L. C. & S. C. railroad, are attending court.

—Judge Orvis is on the bench this week, presiding with his usual dignity and urbanity. The business of court is being conducted with dispatch, and District Attorney Spangler has his hands full.

—Major John A. Wolfe, of Snow Shoe, went to Philadelphia on Monday, to purchase a stock of goods, for his new store shortly to be opened in the above town.

Humes' Hall.—This new hall in Hume's new granite building, on Allegheny street, is now fully completed, and it is a model! The hall is entered through a capacious stairway from the street to a spacious landing, from which spacious double doors afford admission. The impression one receives from a first view of the interior of the hall is very pleasing. The aisles are all carpeted. The ceiling is very high, and presents the best models of frescoing we most ever saw, while from the centre depends a magnificent chandelier of very peculiar and unique design, and supporting twelve burners. Twenty gas brackets, of two burners each, relieve the walls at regular intervals around the hall. The stage is not exactly a stage, but rather a rostrum. It is not arranged for the accommodation of theatrical troupes, by any means. It is simply a plain, broad stage, with dressing room and lobby, ingeniously and excellently lighted, with a pleasing landscape fresco in the background. A single drop curtain divides the Stage from the auditorium. The sittings are most comfortably, pleasantly and cozily arranged. There is not a bench in the hall, nothing but orchestra chairs, and enough of them to seat three hundred and fifty persons, without crowding or incommoding in the least, and, if necessary, there is plenty of room for a hundred more. Along the length of the rear, and extending some distance on the the sides, is a gallery that contains sittings for two hundred more. The hall is sixty feet in length by forty in width, and is the neatest hall of its kind that we have ever seen.

Buying on Credit.—The practice of buying on credit the necessary articles of the household is fatal to good economy. The housekeeper has always to pay dearer when she does not pay cash. The tradesman must have interest for his money, for a man will never, in a business community, be willing, and is seldom able if he were willing, to forego it. To the ordinary cash prices of the articles he therefore adds the interest that may accrue during the time that credit is allowed. This, however, is not all. There must be a premium exacted by the dealer for the risk he runs in trusting his goods to that class of more or less dangerous customers who never pay ready money.

Even the most honestly disposed of these men are often unsafe debtors, for they are generally such as are imprudent enough to anticipate their incomes, and to overrun them in expenditures. The credit system, moreover, is a temptation to unnecessary purchases. There is a sort of check in the sight and touch of the hard won money to the disposition to dispose of it lightly. On the other hand, there is something in the facility of credit, removing as it does the disagreeable necessity of payment to a vague future, very seductive to the buyer, who can gratify his love of possession with a momentary sense, at any rate, that its gratification costs him nothing. There is no such cheap and cautious purchaser as cash.

——A laughable incident occurred yesterday: A young man, dressed in the height of fashion, fell into the creek from the board walk that our local has been worrying so much about for several weeks past. A large crowd witnessed the accident and evinced their sympathy by loud laughter. The young man good naturedly said: "Well, its a good thing I bought my clothes at John Montgomery's, No. 7 Brockerhoff Row, they won't shrink."

A Little Row in a Church.—On Saturday last, the Lutheran church at Centre Hall was dedicated with appropriate ceremony. Rev. Wolf, of the Pa. Theological Seminary, preached a very excellent and impressive ceremony. A large congregation was in attendance, and many visitors from other denominations. At the conclusion, Professor Wolf, announced that a collection would be taken up, to pay off the debt remaining on the church, and, as usual, inquired how many were present who would give $500.00. After doing his best to get some rich auditor to subscribe that amount, and failing, he dropped the figure to $250.00, and expected, and waited and entreated for responses, but none came. His most eloquent appeals and fervent entreaties brought out not a donor at that figure. Rev. Mr. Fischer, the pastor "loci," in his astonishment, at the impecuniosity of his rich members arose and said that it was too bad that there were none that would give that amount. He could name a dozen in the congregation who were able, and whose duty it was to subscribe that amount. At this point, an old man by the name of George Durst, a rich man, and probably one of the stingiest on the continent, arose and said:

"That's right, Brother Fischer, that's right; just name the $250.00 men—let's hear the names!"

"Put Mr. Durst down for $250.00," said the domine.

But Mr. Durst was not disposed to agree to a proposition of that kind. He said:

"I try to live a Christian man, to be honest and liberal, and generous, but there is one man here (pointing to a gentleman in the congregation) who has robbed me of thousands of dollars. He pretends to be a Christian, and you people think he is, but I know him; he is not. He is a scoundreal (raising voice,) an infernal ——" At this point the majority of the congregation were on their feet; some were standing on the benches; others cried "put him out," "shame on him," and other similar manifestations and disapprobation. It was an unusual and unpleasant scene in a church, but order was finally restored, and, we are glad to say, that the balance of the assembly contributed generously to the fund for building the church, and the accomplished pastor, Rev. Mr. Fischer, is very much delighted.

——Go to S. & A. Loeb, on Allegheny Street, and "see what money will do."

Boils.—Isn't it wonderful how many people are suffering from boils! You can't turn around but what you meet a boil. Their ruddy complexion and beet-like shape, assuming all the proportions of a young volcano, with crater sending forth fire, smoke and lava, thrust themselves in sight everywhere. Boils to the right of us; boils in front of us; boils all around us! That's the way it is in Bellefonte, anyway. They are quite fashionable. We believe that to W. J. Kealsh, Esq., belongs the credit of introducing them this fall. He sported a fine bulky carbunkle on the back of his neck for several months; and he was so proud of it that he staid at home and enjoyed it all to himself and family. Mr. Jack Grice, at Unionville, set the example up there. His emanated from the back of his head; and, when it had reached the stature of a full grown boil, it bore a close resemblance to Pikes Peak, when the evening's sun lights it up with streaks of red and yellow. Even Rev. Mr. Crittenden, the active little Sunday-school missionary, growed one of them—on his hand—a large, round, plump one. It makes a good hand full, but the little preacher has clothed it warmly in linen, and is trying the hot-house method of cultivating it. It is getting ripe fast. There are a dozen or two of other boils about town, that we have in our mind's eye, but we won't particularize. A boil is a good deal like a mule's hind foot; it won't bear handling. Nothing is so much calculated to destroy a man's peace and serenity of mind as a well developed boil. One boil in the family has been known to bring ignominy, disgrace and shame to every member of the household. The latest boil out is owned and cared for by Billy Reber, the Deputy Prothonotary. Billy has been a changed man ever since he commenced wearing boils. He stands around all day and never thinks of sitting down. He wouldn't sit down, we don't believe, if a man were to offer him five dollars.

——Laura Miller, late of Philipsburg, stole a new dress from a lady in Altoona, and wore it to the Chestnut Avenue M. E. church of that city, on Sunday evening of last week. The police came into church and escorted Laura away from the services to the lock-up, and she wears one of her own dresses now, while waiting on the next term of the Blair county court.

——French prunes, new raisins, figs, lemons, oranges, appler, cranberries, nuts, confectionery, and all kinds of foreign and domestic fruits at Sechler's famous grocery, opposite our office, and prices too low for successful competition.

——December 10th is the day fixed by Governor Hartranft and staff for visiting the Pennsylvania State College.

Small Pox.—We do not desire to provoke a scare or make a false alarm, but the fact is, that there are at least two well defined cases of small pox in the county. Esquire Boggs, of Milesburg, has it, and also a man at the Forge. Report has it that Mr. Boggs caught the infection somewhere in the West. There is no necessity of this loathsome disease spreading over the county, but there is danger of it. The ordinary precautions are so well known to all that it is not necessary for us to repeat them. We would, however, advise everybody to get vaccinated. If the small pox should make its appearance in Bellefonte, there is no telling the amount of distress it may produce during the oncoming winter. Every precaution should be resorted to; but it is almost impossible to prevent its spreading. Indiscretions will occur, and the utmost vigilance, sometimes, will not keep it within bounds. We advise our borough authorities to secure some suitable and isolated building and fit it up comfortably, and have it in readiness for the occupancy of any who should be so unfortunate as to take it. This could be done at a trifling cost, and it may be the means of saving many from its loathsome grasp, and prevent much suffering and loss of life. This course might seem like borrowing trouble, but here, we think, is the proper place for the ounce of prevention. When placards bearing the legend, "Small Pox," are hung about the doors of houses, and everybody is living in fear and suspense, is no time to take the means we have suggested. Let it be done immediately. There may be no danger, but it will be at least simple prudence to prepare for the worst.

A Want Supplied.—The American mind is active. It has given us books of fiction for the sentimentalist, learned books for the scholar and professional student, but few books for the people. A book for the people must relate to a subject of universal interest. Such a subject is the physical man, and such a book "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," a copy of which has been recently laid on our table. The high professional attainments of its author—Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo N. Y.,—and the advantages derived by him, from an extensive practice, would alone insure for his work a cordial reception. But these are not the merits for which it claims our attention. The Author is a man of the people. He sympathizes with them in all their afflictions, efforts, and attainments. He perceives their want—a knowledge of themselves—and believing that all truth should be made as universal as God's own sunlight, from his fund of learning and experience he has produced a work in which he gives them the benefits of his labors. In it he considers man in every phase of his existence, from the moment he emerges "from a rayless atom, too diminutive for the sight, until he gradually evolves to the maturity of those conscious powers, the exercise of which furnishes subjective evidence of our immortality." Proceeding upon the theory that every fact of mind has a physical antecedent, he has given an admirable treatise on Cerebral Physiology, and shown the bearings of the facts thus established upon individual and social welfare. The Author believes with Spencer, that "as vigorous health and its accompanying high spirits are larger elements of happiness than any other things whatever, the teaching how to maintain them is a teaching that yields to no other whatever," and accordingly has introduced an extensive discussion of the methods, by which we may preserve the integrity of the system, and oftimes prevent the onset of disease. Domestic Remedies—their preparation, uses, and effects—form a prominent feature of the work. The hygienic treatment, or nursing of the sick, is an important subject, and receives attention commensurate with its importance. Nearly all diseases "to which flesh is heir" are described, their symtoms and causes explained, and proper domestic treatment suggested. To reciprocate the many favors bestowed upon him by a generous public, the author offers his book at a price ($1.50) little exceeding the cost of publication. Our readers can obtain this practical and valuable work by addressing the author.
